The Detroit style pizza legacy began at Buddy's pizzeria on Six Mile and Conant Street on Detroit's east side, when in 1946 Gus Guerra and his team made their first square-shaped pizza. Baked in forged steel pans borrowed from local automotive plants they were able to produce a very light and crispy focaccia-like crust which is now known as Detroit Style pizza. This was first known in the U.S and now, more than 75 years later, the pizza has become an iconic part of Detroit. Detroit style pizza is recognisable by its iconic square shape and crunchy, cheesy corner slices, influenced by the original Sicilian style recipe.
